

Career Romance For Young Moderns Exhibit

As a subgenre of Romance fiction, Career Romance Novels were written in the 1950s and 1960s for young women just graduating college and entering the workforce. Even local author Ruby Radford contributed to this category under her pen name Marcia Ford. On display from June to September 2017 in the Georgia Heritage room is a unique collection of these works.

